FACTORY IS DESTROYED

Plant of Wisconsin Veneer Company is Wiped Out By Fire—Loss Partially Covered By Insurance.

The intermittent shrieking of the whistles in the neighborhood of the plant of the Wisconsin Veneer Company shortly after 1:30 o'clock Tuesday morning developed the fact that that institution was on fire and that the flames were giving the firemen plenty to do.

The blaze seemed to have originated in the dry kiln of the plant which was filled with seasoned veneer and that part of the building was catching fire in a short time.

Both fire companies responded to the alarm and good service was rendered. The wind was blowing directly from the southwest and the flames were carried over the roof shed of the North-Western Railroad Co. and around the oil house of the Standard Oil Co., where hundreds of gallons of kerosene and gasoline were stored. Persistent work on the part of the firemen however saved the oil house and contents although an explosion was expected any minute. The coal in the sheds also caught but the fire was extinguished there before much damage was done. The small line with house of J. Morton also escaped destruction although it was enveloped in flames several times. The buildings were saturated with water from a half dozen nozzles and the heavy work of the firemen under the direction of Chief Little is worthy of praise.

The dry kiln of the plant in which the fire is supposed to have originated contained in the neighborhood of $5,000.00 worth of finished veneer, all of which was in shipping condition. In the lot was a selected carload for a firm in Hamburg, Germany. Foreman Hart, who was in charge of the factory, felt the loss of this particular batch keenly as the grain in the wood was perfect and the lot, in his opinion, was the finest ever turned from the knives.

The factory had been cleaned from one end to the other, all debris having been gathered up and burned by order of Manager Dayton. The cleaning process took place just two weeks ago and the dry kiln was particularly free from all rubbish.

The main camp of the company was changed recently and logs were coming in rapidly, the factory yard being well filled with timber.

It was the intention of the company to put on a full crew and work both machines and everything was in readiness when the fire occurred.

Mr. Dayton, the secretary and manager of the company, was at Grand Rapids, Mich., at the time of the fire and arrived here in response to a telegram sent early Tuesday morning by the bookkeeper Louis Petty.

The loss is estimated at $15,000 with insurance on the building and material burned of $12,000.

Seventy men were employed at the factory and the company is looked upon as one of the most reliable in the city. Three camps were operated and the men's time has always been cashed here at the local office.

The prospects of the factory being rebuilt at once are bright as there is plenty of timber available for the plant and the shipping facilities are most favorable.

Sells 1,000,000 Feet of Pine.

It is reported from Merrill that the well known lumbering firm of John O'Day & Co. has disposed of 1,000,000 feet of white pine timber located in Iron county to Williamson & Co. of Oshkosh. This about puts an end to the O'Day Company's operation, after twelve years of successful logging. When organized the firm consisted of John O'Day of Merrill and John Daly of Grand Rapids. During the twelve years of its career the company has logged about 20,000,000 feet of timber. The scene of the last operations was in Iron county, where several camps were conducted in the winter of 1901-02.

Boys River Trip.

A party consisting of W. B. Lasselle, H. C. O'Connor and his friend, Mr. Smith of Philadelphia, Frank Sawtell and Sam Walker returned Saturday from a Wisconsin river trip of a week's duration. Their boats were put in along the river in the chain of lakes and were pulled down into the Wisconsin. The party enjoyed the outing as the water was high and the long trip one of pleasure owing to the high water. Many fish were caught, some of the catches being so numerous that the fish were thrown back in the water after being landed in the boat.

A Good Hay Crop.

Thomas McKinnon lays claim to the banner hay crop raised in Oneida county this season. Of four acres, he cut over nine tons of fine timothy and clover. The ground was sown for the first time last spring and the crop was a record breaker. The cutting was done by Pat Ryan who finished the job in seven days. Tom's land is located northeast of this city in Town 26, Range 11.

ITALIAN LABORERS QUIT

Fifty of the Crew of the Hackworth Company Quit Work and Return to Milwaukee.

Owing to dissatisfaction at being separated and left off in gangs under the foremanship of Americans the entire force of Italians threw up their jobs Tuesday night and left the following morning for Milwaukee, their headquarters.

Superintendent Vinal, who is in charge of the Hackworth work here is not at all sorry that the sons of Sunny Italy have taken their clothes and gone. Twenty men applied for work Wednesday morning and were given jobs and notwithstanding the unceremonious leave-taking of the Italians the work of the company has gone on just the same and from outward appearances fully as much has been accomplished. The Italian crowd numbered a few good workers but according to the men in authority, a still larger number of time killers. It is understood that some of the best workers will return.

Another powerful hoisting engine has been set up this side of the "Soo" tracks and also a forty horsepower horizontal boiler and engine which will furnish steam for the rock drills and also pump water.

A big rock ledge has been encountered where the excavating is going on for the tail race and the steady hammering of the steel drills is now heard on both sides of the "Soo" right-of-way.

The big derrick which was unsent when the wheel pit was filled with water has been raised and placed in a new position in the pit. While the main hoist was idle Engineer Reynolds in charge of the other steam lift was kept busy taking care of the loads that came his way.

The "Soo" Line has a gang of bridgemen at work and their apparatus is now here for putting in the steel span which is to be placed over the race way.

THE SUMMER CAPITAL OF PLEASURE

Of course, Newport has permanent advantages. It is the headquarters in the world of the British embassy, whose members are far too precious to be trusted in the heat of a Washington summer. Other embassies show a tendency to share this exile from the capital. There are the Naval college and naval evolutions and yacht cruises. Most of all, there is the strong of newly-rich, forever pressing to make its way into the bored, idle, resourceless "charmed circle." The latter are hardly counted an element of strength, however. The Newport of the tradesmen knows very well that they would fly in a panic in chase of the notables, should they desert the place.

As for the American naval officers, they would be killed.

Ray Dwyer, a brakeman on Langley & Alderson's logging train at Star Lake, received injuries while at work last Friday morning which resulted in his death at the Merrill hospital Monday. Ray was standing on a flat car while the train was passing under a trestle. The trestle, which was rather low, struck him in the head before he had time to stoop. He was knocked off the car and run over by the remainder of the train. His legs and arms were cut and broken, and his internal organs badly lacerated.

It is said that he suffered terribly before he died. Dwyer was a young man eighteen years of age. His people resided at Merrill. While in the employ of the Geo. E. Wood Lumber Company at Woodlawn, this spring, he visited Rhinelander frequently and had a large acquaintance here.

Walt Being German Colony Here.

C. W. Thomas of St. Paul was in the city Friday and Saturday looking over lands in Towns 37 and 38, Range 7 with a view of locating a colony of Germans here. Alex. Colby accompanied the gentleman on his tour of inspection and will assist in locating the new settlers when they arrive. Mr. Thomas is in touch with a large number of prospective land buyers who are favorably impressed with this section as an agricultural locality and it is possible that many more of the Teutonic race will settle in this neighborhood before the snow falls.

Building Alleys With Open.

The Lawley bowling alleys in the Stapleton building on Stevens street have been scraped and put in shape for business and the alleys will be opened to the public Saturday, Aug. 15, of this week. Jas. Lawley, the proprietor, has the alleys in good condition and it is now up to those who like to twirl the finger balls down the straight and narrow path. The game is an interesting and at the same time exhilarating one and the weather just at present is just right for the exercise.

GLENN ZACHKE MATCH.

Articles of agreement were signed yesterday between Jack Glenn, now of this city and Otto Zachke of Appleton, for an eight round boxing contest before the Calumet Athletic Club at the latter city in the near future. The match will be for a purse of $250.00.

Wm. Daniels is training Glenn who states that he is in good condition.

THE HOT DAYS IN THE CITY

—Other Items.

New York.—Why deny that Newport is nervous at the prospect that it may one of these days be deserted, at the whim of the leaders of fashion? It is nervous.

Here is a city of 22,000 people, without a single industry of note except catering to summer residents. No factory chimneys belch forth smoke; the "cottagers" wouldn't like it. No lathe turns or spindle whizzes or chisel falls, except for the local industries of building; the "cottagers" are fussy about quiet. The mayor and councilmen are obsequious in bowing to the wishes of the rich summer element—unless the summer element is divided against itself, as it is in the matter of checking murderous racing automobiles and in half a dozen other little matters.

The tax valuation of the entire permanent city is less than that of perhaps 200 summer families who may average a month a year each in the place. The hotel population is singularly small, perhaps, only five per cent. of what it is at Saratoga. The cottagers are supreme.

This is the condition to which a city has fallen that was in its early years a trade rival of Boston and Salem and Sag Harbor and New York—the last of this quietly assorted quartet not by any means then most considered. More than one of the vast fortunes which are in Rhode Island so disproportionately to the size of the state and its population were founded upon the Rhode Island slave trade, when Newport was the chief port of the traffic. Now if the rich take the sudden fancy to leave it, what will be its fate?

And Mrs. Fish has placed her residence upon the market for sale! Mrs. Ostrich is contemplating a similar step. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt the younger will remain abroad with her husband during August, preeminently the Newport month.

Mrs. Fish, Mrs. Ostrich, Mrs. Vanderbilt—the triumvirate that leads the residents of the gay summer set—no wonder Newport looks grave!

REVELATIONS FROM THE COMPANY
WHINELANDER - WISCONSIN

A proposition to increase the number of studies in the schools merely recalls the saying of Josh Billings that it is better not to know so much rather than "know so many things that are not so."

The recent trek of college students to Kansas has suggested to Cornell University the idea of buying several farms, upon which it can give its students all the farm work they want.

It is passing strange that with all the volumes of prognostications that have been written about the population none of the wise ones hit upon the name of Cardinal Sarto as a possible successor to Leo XIII.

Though more populous than this country, the Russian empire has but 600 newspapers. The number in this country is 22,000. Newspapers can be summarized in Russia, but few Americans would prefer the exact methods or the privilege of living under them.

The announcement that 2,600 automobile chairs will be for hire, either with or without chauffeur, at the St. Louis exposition next year, warns us that when we go to the fair we should manage to carry our baggage in on hand, as we shall have to take our life in the other.

The eruption of Vesuvius is diminishing. The volcano may be beginning to realize that despite its long and distinguished record, those younger specialists in the business, Police and Sanitary, are attracting attention in a way that is pretty hard for an old-timer to compete with.

In Oklahoma they have a way, who disappointed in the expectation that railroad will come their way, of loading the town upon wheels and moving it over to the railroad. Just now four such boom towns are on their way to other locations. If they would wait a year or two doubtless they could have trolley lines for the asking.

A youth of 39 years has died in Michigan from the excessive use of tobacco. In 12 years this reckless young person had smoked 45,000 cigars, but this was temperate compared with his earlier smoking. What a lesson this is to all tobacco users, especially to the young, for had this man refrained from dallying with the noxious weed he might have reached the ripe age of 90.

The census office bulletin for electric and street railways, by which is meant all electric roads, whether city or interurban, just published, gives the figures for 1912, which show a total of 987 companies, all but 170 of which are operating companies. The par value of the capital stock and funded debt outstanding was $2,508,252,092. There were 22,576.59 miles of single track. The total income was $250,504,627.

Eugene McCarthy, who is only 25 years of age, ran for the assembly in New York last fall and was elected. This was largely due to the efforts of Miss S. M. Goodwin, a school teacher, who made a personal canvass of the district in support of Mr. McCarthy and won with him on his speaking tour. Such devotion has its reward. Miss Goodwin will spend the coming winter in Albany, the wife of Eugene McCarthy.

The frequent interruption of school in Kansas by the marriage of young teachers has caused the school board in many counties to insert clauses in contracts with teachers prohibiting marriage or cohabitation during the school term. The boards may be able to prevent marriage during term time, but will take a large constabulary to keep the young women from having "company" or even receiving wireless messages.

British battleships come high. The outfit for one that is now under way will be $7,500,000. This is a great deal more than the most expensive of our warships cost. In fact, it is nearly three times the amount expended to construct and equip the Kearsarge, as fine a type of a fighting machine as is now afloat. Some of the vessels being constructed for our navy will cost considerably more than did the Kearsarge, but none will approach the British figures.

Score one for the Russian government. It announces its intention of providing for an international exposition at St. Petersburg, to be called "The Child's World." It is proposed to have comprehensive exhibits from all civilized countries concerning the moral, physical and intellectual education of childhood and youth, making a complete picture of child life in all countries, from birth to school days. The idea is certainly very original, and is notable for the complete ignoring of commercial or business considerations, and yet it is not entirely new with the czar.

A Berlin physician of renown, believing that excessive practice at the piano is responsible in a measure for the alarming spread of nervous diseases, has instituted a campaign against beginning the musical education of children at the early age now customary both in this country and in Europe. In his opinion no girl should be permitted to enter upon the study of music before the age of 16, and even then the hours of drumming upon the keyboard should be restricted to two a day. The family next door may prescribe 15 minutes.

The proposal to establish a public park in or near the city of Honolulu as a memorial to the late President McKinley will probably be abandoned. Instead of this tribute to the chief executive whose administration the people of Hawaii became citizens of the United States, it is now planned to erect a McKinley memorial light-house at the entrance of Honolulu harbor. This would be a prominent situation from both land and sea, besides being of great practical utility. The project meets with much favor, and is likely to be carried into effect.

A WEEK'S HISTORY

The Important Happenings of a Week Briefly Told.

IN ALL PARTS OF THE UNION

All the latest news of interest from the shipping port in "Mc" tanks, their heads, like all West Indian they are remarkable for their ability to carry heavy weights in this manner. Once the company which controls the time value industry sought to light the burden of its laborers by introducing wheelbarrows.

The negroes filled the wheelbarrow readily enough, and then carried them on their heads as they had been used to carry the baskets. Many a negro woman will carry a hundredweight or more on her head for a distance of a mile or more.—Indianapolis News.

Samling the House.
The custom of naming a ship when it is launched with the breaking of a bottle of wine on the prow is a survival of an ancient practice which has many forms. In early times, when the frame of a house was raised, the bottle of wine was broken on the ridge pole. The usage is mentioned in Mc Lellan's "History of Gorham, Maine." It was the custom at a raising to break a bottle of spirit on the ridge pole and to repeat some rhyme, "naming the frame," as it was called. When in 1830, Jacob H. Clement of West Gorham raised a stable, John Phinney, an old Revolutionary soldier who was present, repeated the following lines which he said were used in naming the frame of Captain John Stephenson's house and barn, which were raised about 1775:

FOR THE HOUSE FRAME.
Cursed is the Tory's heart
Which from the congress laws depart;
If the laws they do not fear
If they will not stand proper here,
And if the laws they do obey
I hope they will prosper in corn and hay.

Chair Postures.
It is one thing to have a chair and another to know how to sit on it. The ideal of a graceful sitting posture has varied in the different ages of the world. The Egyptian sat bolt upright, the knees and feet closely pressed together. It was the ceremonial attitude. The Greeks and Romans, when they were at liberty to forget their dignity, sat stooping, with one or both elbows supported by the arms of the chair.

The Chinese ideal was with the knees and feet wide apart. They have maintained that attitude in sitting for 400 years. The Saxons and early Normans were represented in old manuscript and on coins in the same position. Down to a date comparatively recent, kings and queens received sitting stuffy on their thrones, a marked change of posture being thought to derogate from the royal dignity. They now receive standing.

A Legend of February.
Here is the pretty legend which tells why February has only twenty-eight, or twenty-nine days. Long ago, they say, February was a gambler, and he was so unlucky that he soon lost all his money. Like other gamblers, he tried to recover it, and he said to his companions that if they would lend him some money he would give them as security one of his days. January and March, who were naturally associated with him more often than any of the other months, accepted his offer, and as poor February soon lost the money which he had borrowed each of them acquired one of his days. That is why January and March have each thirty-one days and February has only twenty-eight in ordinary and twenty-nine in leap years.

DEATH IN PANIC AT BALL GAME

Eight Killed and Many Injured in an Accident at Philadelphia.

TWELVE MORE LIKELY TO DIE

Remnants of an exploded bomb at the Park Glue Way, Maryland. Victims in the debris twenty feet below.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 10.—Eight persons were killed, at least 12 fatally injured, and fully 200 seriously hurt Saturday afternoon by the fall of a walk overhanging the left field bleachers at the Philadelphia National League baseball park.

In the neighborhood of 200 people were on the walk at the time of its collapse, and plunged with it 20 feet into the street. In an instant the scene just outside the grounds was one of horror. For an entire block along Fifteenth street, from Huntington street to Lehigh avenue, men and boys lay in writhing heaps.

Dead and Fatally Injured.
The accident was one of the most appalling in recent years, and among scores of bleeding men and boys quickly taken to hospitals it is feared that fully a dozen will not be able to survive their terrible injuries. The deaths are as follows: Edward Graham, Alfred Rodgers, and two persons killed, others injured, and many houses wrecked.

Enormous Damage Done to Grains and Fruit Crops—Thickly Populated Territory in Ruins.

Pittsburg, Kan., Aug. 10.—Michael McMillen and Mrs. Antonio Sarto were killed, over 50 persons were injured, some of them fatally, and enormous damage was done to residence, mining and farm property by a terrific storm which swept over this section Saturday.

The storm passed through the thickly populated mining district north and east of Pittsburg, destroying hundreds of houses, mine tunnels and buildings of every description, leveling to a mass of wreckage a large portion of every camp between the Devil-Miller shaft north of Frontenac and the Morgan shaft on the state line, and converting into ruins a strip of thickly populated territory eight miles long and two miles wide.

At the town of Nelson, about five miles north of Pittsburg, the depot was wrecked and several houses were blown from their foundations. McMillen was killed at Nelson and George Sarto, his wife, his son and daughter were dangerously injured.

At Parsons several stores were badly wrecked. The front of the Hall Dry Goods company's building was blown in and six persons were hurt slightly. The storm was severe in the surrounding country also and great damage has been done there.

At Abilene several houses were unroofed, scores of barns and windmills were demolished, and hundreds of wheat stacks were scattered over the fields. The hail destroyed much young corn planted since the May flood.

GHOU CONFESSIONS.
Rufus Cantrell Gives Details of Several Murders Committed at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Aug. 10.—Rufus Cantrell, known as "King of the Colored Ghouls," who is serving a sentence in the Indiana reformatory for grave robbing, has made a sworn confession that he had a part in several murders in this city. He first refers to the killing of Policeman Watterton, the mystery of which crime has never been solved. He tells of the murder of Walter Johnson, a negro, of a man from Pennsylvania named Claude, and gives in detail the story of the murder of Carrie Selva, who escaped from a hospital in a demerol condition and has never been heard from.

Death of W. F. Dodge.

Indianapolis, Aug. 10.—Rufus Cantrell, known as "King of the Colored Ghouls," who is serving a sentence in the Indiana reformatory for grave robbing, has made a sworn confession that he had a part in several murders in this city. He first refers to the killing of Policeman Watterton, the mystery of which crime has never been solved. He tells of the murder of Walter Johnson, a negro, of a man from Pennsylvania named Claude, and gives in detail the story of the murder of Carrie Selva, who escaped from a hospital in a demerol condition and has never been heard from.

Death of W. F. Dodge.
Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 10.—William E. Dodge, the New York millionaire and philanthropist, died Sunday at Stanwood, his summer home here, aged 71 years. To Cure Pimples.
Local treatment will cure pimples, but you must attend to the laws of hygiene. A daily bath with a fresh brush will stimulate the functions of the skin. Once a day using a towel out of hot water and lay it over the face, keeping it there until the skin is steaming hot. Which haze is a good application for facial eruptions, especially when followed with a sponging of camellia oil, to which a pinch of borax has been added.—Chicago Tribune.

Heart Strings Particularly.
Whatever music there may be in the instrument called man, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, cannot be brought out fully and entirely until a woman takes it in charge and plays upon the strings of it.

Interest Will Revive.
Now that concessions are being granted for The Pike of the St. Louis World's Fair, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, popular interest in that enterprise will greatly revive.

HOSTILE FLEET LOSES THE GAME

Admiral Barker Captures "Enemy" After an Exciting Chase.

SEVERAL SHOTS WERE FIRED

Don Played an Important Part in the Manoeuvres of the New England Coast—Features of the Mille Warfare.

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 10.—The "hostile fleet" in the mimic war has been captured. The enemy is now in the harbor.

The hostile fleet were sighted for the second time during the night at three a. m. by the Olympia, which signaled the flagship Kearsarge. The Kearsarge, with the Illinois and the Alabama, put after the enemy, who surrendered after shots had been fired by the Kearsarge.

Caught in Nick of Time.
The naval search problem, which began last Wednesday noon when Rear Admiral Barker took up the plan of defending the Maine coast from a "hostile" fleet which put to sea on Monday under Rear Admiral Sands, ended early Saturday when the Olympia, the flagship of the defending fleet, discovered and intercepted the "white squadron" of the enemy, headed at full speed for Winter harbor. The hostile vessels were running in close order formation and had not the fog lifted at a favorable moment it is thought the enemy would have eluded those on guard.

As it turned out, before her consort could reach the scene in answer to her signals the Olympia had been forced to fly the white flag and consider herself captured or destroyed by the hostile commander.

Long Vigil in Fog.
The Olympia was the foremost to the eastward of the defending ships and had been occupying a position 25 miles outside Baker's island for the greater part of three days. On board of her every man and officer was keenly alive to the fact that Saturday morning of all times the search problem commenced was the most favorable to the plans of the attacking force. A thick fog bank, which rolled in from the sea after midnight, made it impossible to cover the ordinary cruising radius of the Olympia and all that the men on Admiral Dewey's old flagship could do was to depend on their ears and wait.

Fog Clears, Enemy Sighted.
Shortly after four o'clock the fog bank began to roll out to sea and as the atmosphere cleared every man and officer on the deck of the battleship searched the constantly enlarging field of vision with anxiety. Suddenly, there was a very repeated simultaneous cry from various parts of the Olympia's superstructure: "There they are, sir."

Olympia's Predicament.
In an instant bugle notes rang out on the Olympia, men rushed to quarters and the operator in the wireless telegraph room was signaling for the Kearsarge to announce the discovery of the fleet to Rear Admiral Barker. The flagship, 25 miles away, off Mount Desert rock, caught the sound waves and answered in a few moments word came by the wireless that the Kearsarge was on her way to aid the Olympia.

Meanwhile the latter vessel had found herself in a predicament. The fog which had been of advantage to the enemy proved of disadvantage to the Olympia, for when it lifted and Admiral Sands' vessels were seen, they were too close to the defending vessel for her to escape. Under the rules of the maneuvers, she was overpowered by the superior force and could do nothing but run up the white flag and consider herself captured by the hostile squadron.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 10.—At Harper hospital it was said Saturday that all of the 22 injured circusmen, who were brought here Friday from Durand, where Wallace Bros' two circus trains collided Friday, with a loss of life of 22, had passed a good night and would probably recover. Officers Take Leave of the latter and Clerks in His Office Present Him a Loving Cup.

Washington, Aug. 10.—At 12 o'clock Saturday Lieut. Gen. Young issued an order in accordance with the order of the president assuming command of the army of the United States. Previously Gen. Young had taken oath of office in the war department. At 1:30, under an order issued by Adjt. Gen. Corbin, the officers of the army in Washington, including also those at Fort Myer, Va., assembled at the army headquarters and paid their respects to the late lieutenant general, Nelson A. Miles. Gen. Miles arrived in an undress coat with no emblems showing his rank, but with the coat of arms on his shoulders such as is now prescribed to be worn by all officers.

LIEUT. GEN. S. B. M. YOUNG.

Gen. Young appeared with the three stars of the rank of lieutenant general, although he did not actually become lieutenant general until noon. The officers were presented to Gen. Miles by Gen. Corbin and also were presented to Gen. Young.

Gen. Miles left Sunday morning for San Francisco to attend the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. The clerks in the office of Gen. Miles presented him with a handsome silver loving cup and a large vase of flowers.

WENT INTO THE RIVER.

Langley's Airship Made a Fine Start, But Trouble in the Wings Caused Disaster.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 10.—A partly successful experiment with the 15-foot Langley airship was made Saturday morning from the houseboat in the Potomac river off this point.

The aerodrome started well in a straight line south with a velocity of 70 feet per second and flew for a distance variously estimated at from 400 to 600 yards.

Some deflection in the wings soon after the launching caused it to take a downward course which it followed rapidly and was impelled into the water under the full power of her engine.

There was sufficient steam generated for a rapid flight of a half or three-quarters of a mile. Under the full pressure of this force the machine struck the water and a moment more has disappeared from view. The machine was recovered. It was considerably damaged.

The machine was removed to the houseboat where extensive repairs will have to be made before another test can be pulled off.

Fast Train Collides with Engine.
Marshalltown, Ia., Aug. 10.—The Milwaukee & St. Paul fast passenger train No. 1, running 30 miles an hour, collided with a light engine near Capron Saturday morning. Both engines were badly demolished and thrown from the track and the baggage car derailed. The engineer of the passenger engine was slightly hurt. No passengers were injured, although all were badly shaken up.

Swept by Wind.
Carthage, Mo., Aug. 10.—A strong windstorm before daylight destroyed thousands of dollars' worth of fruit and shade trees and caused more or less damage to small buildings and mining property here and at Jasper, Lamar and Seneca, taking in three counties along the Kansas line.

Beer General Dies.
Munich, Aug. 10.—Col. Schiel, who was commander in the Boer army during the Transvaal war, died in a hospital at Reichenhall Saturday. His health was shattered by the privations of the war and his confinement as a prisoner on the island of St. Helena.

Lake Steamer Sinks.
Bad Axe, Mich., Aug. 10.—The stern bearing of the steamer Metropole, owned by John Stevenson, of Detroit, loosened ten miles off Port Austin, in Saginaw bay, allowing the vessel to fill and go down. The crew saved themselves in the small boat.

Omaha Firm Falls.
Omaha, Neb., Aug. 10.—The Merrill commission company, a grain and stock brokerage firm, suspended Saturday. The concern operated branches in a number of Iowa and Nebraska towns and did an extensive business.

Both Bodies Recovered.
Cleveland, O., Aug. 10.—The bodies of Dr. Adolph Cudell and Dr. Ernest Laeke, who were drowned in Lake Erie last Wednesday, have been recovered. Cudell's Friday and Laeke's Saturday.

CORONATION OF POPE PIUS X.

Ceremony at St. Peter's Witnessed by a Vast Multitude.

PRINCES AND NOBLES PRESENT

Senior Cardinal Maffei Places the Crown Upon the Pontiff's Head—Apostolic Benediction Ends the Ceremonies.

Rome, Aug. 10.—The ceremony of the coronation of Pope Pius X. took place Sunday in the basilica of St. Peter's in the presence of the princes and high dignitaries of the church, diplomats and Roman nobles, and with all the solemnity and splendor associated with this, the most magnificent rite in the Roman Catholic church.

As Cardinal Maffei, the dean of the cardinal-deacons, placed the triple crown on the head of the venerable pontiff the throng of 70,000 persons gathered within the cathedral burst into unrestrained acclamations, the choir intoned a hymn of triumph and the bells of Rome rang out a joyful peal.

The Pope Thence. It is 57 years since the Romans and Europe assisted at such a function as was held in St. Peter's Sunday. The great basilica, popularly supposed never to have been quite full, was overflowing with humanity. The papal throne, a bewildering mixture of gold, red and silver, was erected in front of the high altar.

"Holy Father, thus passes away the glory of the world."

altar. As, contrary to custom on these ceremonious occasions, there were no galleries, the basilica bore more of its normal aspect. On the altar, which was dressed in white, stood the famous silver gilt candelsticks and a magnificent crucifix.

Exchanges in Worship. Before leaving the Vatican the pope went to the Sistine chapel to worship before the sacrament exposed therein, thence passing through the Sala Regia and the Constantine staircase into the portico of the basilica. He there seated himself on a throne erected directly before the high altar and with staid around for the members of the sacred college, the chapter of St. Peter's and the papal court. At the right of the throne stood Prince Orsini, the assistant to the papal throne, who withdrew his recent resignation of the post in order to participate at the function. The pontiff was exceedingly pale but composed.

Presented Greetings. The low ceiling sent back an exquisite echo of the "tonus petrus" sang by the Sistine choir. Cardinal Rampollo advanced with dignity, knelt and kissed the foot of the pontiff. He then presented in a firm voice the wishes and greetings of the chapter of St. Peter's, which, he said, offer an act of obedience to your holiness and wish you a prosperous and glorious pontificate.

The pontiff was visibly touched, and answering in a trembling voice, warmly thanked the chapter for their well wishes. "Good wishes," he said, "are extremely precious."

Blesses the Multitude. The procession then reformed and proceeded to the door of the basilica, through which Pius X. cast an almost stern, glacial glance, whispering to Dr. Lappoli, "Shall I ever be able to go through with it?"

On the appearance of the pontiff it seemed as though the people would seek to carry him in their arms, so great was their enthusiasm. Cries of "Pius, our pope, our father," and "Long live Pius X." were raised and continued until the pontiff was compelled to rise and bless the multitude, and at the same time he made a sign for more reverential behavior.

A Quiet Ceremony. A quiet ceremony was then carried out. The master of the ceremonies knelt three times before the pontiff, each time lighting a handful of hemp which surrounded a silver torch, and as the flame flared and then died out he chanted "pater sancte, sic transit gloria mundi" (Holy Father, thus passes away the glory of the world). Then all the cardinals donned their silver copes and white mitres and the pope was borne to the throne amid renewed acclamations and waving of handkerchiefs, fans and hats.

Magnificent Scene. The scene presented on his mounting the throne formed a magnificent picture to which no pen could do justice. The central figure was the venerable pontiff, seated on the throne. Two lines of cardinals clad in silver and scarlet reached to the high altar with its burden of burning candles and sacred vessels, while around stood the papal guards, the pontifical court, monks and officials. The cathedral was illuminated with twinkling lights, while the marble columns and walls rendered the color scheme more vivid.

Reveries the Pontiff. From the throne Pius X., surrounded by his suite, walked to the high altar, standing over the crypt of St. Peter, into which meanwhile Cardinal Maffei descended to pray. The pope then blessed the altar, and after saying the "indignation" the mantle, a symbol of the cord with which Christ was bound on his capture, was placed, with great ceremony, upon the pope's arm. At the same time prayers for the coronation were recited.

A NEW DISEASE DISCOVERED

Mrs. James G. Blaine's Place in National Politics—A New Generation in Power in the Army—Other Items.

Washington.—Elisha S. Theall, the young attorney who acted as counsel for Admiral Sampson during the Schley court of inquiry, has attracted attention in army and navy circles by announcing the discovery of a new disease to which only those officers are subject who have served in the far east. The disease is known as gamitis. It takes its name from the island of Guam, where the germ is most prevalent, but it is not unknown in the Philippines.

Mr. Theall has been defending a young prognosticator of the navy who was brought up before a court-martial at the Washington navy yard on charges growing out of carelessness with his accounts, and in order to clear his client he cited official reports and brought forward examples of officers who after service in Guam for a year or more had been found to be entirely uninfected for duty.

Guam is the most isolated of all the American military stations in the far east. A few naval and marine officers and a small detachment of marines constitute the entire English-speaking population, and the climate is so enervating that even the most ambitious quickly succumb and lead a life of irksome routine unembellished with outside interests. The result is physical, mental and sometimes moral deterioration. Dozens of young officers who have had a tour of duty on the island and themselves on their return to civilization quite unfitted to take up the ordinary service to which they have been accustomed. They are subject to physical weakness and to mental depression which makes them irresponsible for their actions.

Since Mr. Theall has called public attention to a condition which has been understood for some time in the service there is a proposition to require every officer relieved from service in Guam to undergo special medical treatment before being detailed to active duty elsewhere.

Holiday Provisions. Clerks in the war and navy departments, and in fact all government clerks in Washington are jubilant over the turn which has been given to the attempt of Secretaries Root and Moody to enforce the law with regard to hours of labor.

For many years it has been the custom during the hot days of summer to close the departments at three o'clock every Saturday afternoon. Instead of at four o'clock, as on other days. Secretaries Root and Moody discovered that the law provided that clerks should work seven hours every day except Sundays and holidays, and after mature deliberation, they regretfully determined that it was beyond their discretion to close the war and navy departments early on Saturday.

For a day or two there was great grief. Then some ingenious clerk bethought himself of a paragraph hidden away in the new code of District of Columbia statutes adopted by congress two years ago. That paragraph, in dealing with negotiable instruments, declares that besides the usually recognized holidays—the Fourth of July, Christmas, New Year's, Decoration day, Washington's Birthday and Labor day—every Saturday after 12 o'clock noon shall be a holiday in the District of Columbia for all purposes. That was a power for the cabinet lawyers. They turned it over to their own legal advisers to investigate, and now the clerks who had expected to be deprived of their extra hour once a week during the summer, are looking forward to a Saturday half holiday all the year round.

New Generation of Soldiers. The retirement of Lieut. Gen. Miles on August 8 and the simultaneous promotion and retirement of some 20 other high officers may be said to be the dividing line between the ascendancy of an old and a new generation in the United States army—just as the death of McKinley and the coming of Roosevelt was the dividing line between two generations in republican politics.

Miles is the last of the commanding generals of the army who achieved fame in the civil war, and when the 20 newly created brigadiers go out of the service within the next 30 days there will be left among the officers of the army less than 100 of any rank whatever who saw military service of any kind between 1861 and 1865.

Gen. Young, who will succeed Miles as lieutenant general, and Chaffee, who will succeed Young, both, it is true, saw service in the civil war, but without achieving distinction. Their rank and reputation grew out of their service in the war with Spain, and later. Should MacArthur succeed Chaffee he will be the last of the lieutenant generals with even a reminiscence of the struggle between the states in his record. At best, Young, Chaffee and MacArthur will remain in the service only a few years, and there will come a generation—most of whom were babies when Miles, Schofield, Sheridan, Sherman and Grant were winning fame.

Nobody can tell yet whether Leonard Wood, who comes by regular promotion to be a major general, will in due course of seniority rise to the higher rank upon MacArthur's retirement. But whether he does or not, lieutenant generalship will then fall to some officer who is in no way Wood's superior in length of active war service.

Mrs. Blaine and Politics. A woman who played a great part in national politics against her own will has recently passed from the scene of action in the death of James G. Blaine. Mrs. Blaine was not consciously a political factor, and yet no woman of her time wielded a greater influence in shaping the destinies of republicans than she. Her husband was a brilliant statesman, a man with a mind as keen as a razor's edge, and if her tastes had run in the direction of politics—if she had been consciously a politician—it is hard to say what she might not have achieved in the great game which is continually playing her in social life at the capital.

But instead of a liking for politics she cherished an aversion to it. Every step in advance which James G. Blaine took, while it gratified her pride in him, was a source of regret to her in that she saw herself constantly thrust forward into a personal prominence which was distasteful, and compelled to combat the ever-growing demand that for political reasons she should mingle with all sorts of people in whom she could not stimulate an interest. Combined with a seclusive temper she had that most dangerous of accomplishments, a quick wit and a ready tongue. She resented and resisted the curtailment of individual liberty which her husband's official position was constantly threatening. When Blaine was secretary of state she made many enemies for both by refusing to return the innumerable calls made upon her on public reception days—a practice which, silly as it was, had grown to be regarded as an official duty. She had to bear the brunt of the criticisms for the innovation which subsequently all cabinet women were forced to follow in self-protection. She made a bitter lifelong enemy of the wife of Benjamin Harrison, who afterwards became mistress of the white house by some cutting comment she gave utterance to when both Blaine and Harrison were in the senate; and that difference led to the tragic candidacy of Blaine for the republican nomination in 1892 and had much to do with the party coolness that resulted in Harrison's defeat.

She had her limited circle of friends, close and devoted, but she entirely lacked the insincerity that would have led those for whom she did not care to count her as their friend. Her last years were clouded with tragedy and sorrow, and death came to her as a relief.

Remedied the Defects. A mischievous messenger boy put in his spare time a few days ago in plugging with putty the eyes and noses of several of the marble statues in Statway hall and now he is suffering from a punishment for "vandalism."

The first statue that this youthful offender fired up was that of Daniel Webster, which stares out of countenance every unfortunate who passes through Statway hall, going from the house of representatives to the senate; he was so well pleased with his achievement that he went on to improve several more. He would have touched up the entire collection of monuments if his puny had not given out.

It is needless to say that the sympathy of the Washington public is with the boy; for in his ineffective way he was simply trying to remedy a few of the defects which have worried visitors to the capitol for many years.

No more grotesque assemblage of marble freaks was ever brought together than the one in Statway hall. Only two or three of the commemorative statues by any stretch of the imagination can be called works of art, and a spot which might have been made as inspiring as Westminster abbey has developed a disgusting degree of rot from Jarley's wax works or the Eden Musee.

Holiday Provisions. Clerks in the war and navy departments, and in fact all government clerks in Washington are jubilant over the turn which has been given to the attempt of Secretaries Root and Moody to enforce the law with regard to hours of labor.

For many years it has been the custom during the hot days of summer to close the departments at three o'clock every Saturday afternoon. Instead of at four o'clock, as on other days. Secretaries Root and Moody discovered that the law provided that clerks should work seven hours every day except Sundays and holidays, and after mature deliberation, they regretfully determined that it was beyond their discretion to close the war and navy departments early on Saturday.

For a day or two there was great grief. Then some ingenious clerk bethought himself of a paragraph hidden away in the new code of District of Columbia statutes adopted by congress two years ago. That paragraph, in dealing with negotiable instruments, declares that besides the usually recognized holidays—the Fourth of July, Christmas, New Year's, Decoration day, Washington's Birthday and Labor day—every Saturday after 12 o'clock noon shall be a holiday in the District of Columbia for all purposes. That was a power for the cabinet lawyers. They turned it over to their own legal advisers to investigate, and now the clerks who had expected to be deprived of their extra hour once a week during the summer, are looking forward to a Saturday half holiday all the year round.

New Generation of Soldiers. The retirement of Lieut. Gen. Miles on August 8 and the simultaneous promotion and retirement of some 20 other high officers may be said to be the dividing line between the ascendancy of an old and a new generation in the United States army—just as the death of McKinley and the coming of Roosevelt was the dividing line between two generations in republican politics.

Miles is the last of the commanding generals of the army who achieved fame in the civil war, and when the 20 newly created brigadiers go out of the service within the next 30 days there will be left among the officers of the army less than 100 of any rank whatever who saw military service of any kind between 1861 and 1865.

Gen. Young, who will succeed Miles as lieutenant general, and Chaffee, who will succeed Young, both, it is true, saw service in the civil war, but without achieving distinction. Their rank and reputation grew out of their service in the war with Spain, and later. Should MacArthur succeed Chaffee he will be the last of the lieutenant generals with even a reminiscence of the struggle between the states in his record. At best, Young, Chaffee and MacArthur will remain in the service only a few years, and there will come a generation—most of whom were babies when Miles, Schofield, Sheridan, Sherman and Grant were winning fame.

Nobody can tell yet whether Leonard Wood, who comes by regular promotion to be a major general, will in due course of seniority rise to the higher rank upon MacArthur's retirement. But whether he does or not, lieutenant generalship will then fall to some officer who is in no way Wood's superior in length of active war service.

Mrs. Blaine and Politics. A woman who played a great part in national politics against her own will has recently passed from the scene of action in the death of James G. Blaine. Mrs. Blaine was not consciously a political factor, and yet no woman of her time wielded a greater influence in shaping the destinies of republicans than she. Her husband was a brilliant statesman, a man with a mind as keen as a razor's edge, and if her tastes had run in the direction of politics—if she had been consciously a politician—it is hard to say what she might not have achieved in the great game which is continually playing her in social life at the capital.

But instead of a liking for politics she cherished an aversion to it. Every step in advance which James G. Blaine took, while it gratified her pride in him, was a source of regret to her in that she saw herself constantly thrust forward into a personal prominence which was distasteful, and compelled to combat the ever-growing demand that for political reasons she should mingle with all sorts of people in whom she could not stimulate an interest. Combined with a seclusive temper she had that most dangerous of accomplishments, a quick wit and a ready tongue. She resented and resisted the curtailment of individual liberty which her husband's official position was constantly threatening. When Blaine was secretary of state she made many enemies for both by refusing to return the innumerable calls made upon her on public reception days—a practice which, silly as it was, had grown to be regarded as an official duty. She had to bear the brunt of the criticisms for the innovation which subsequently all cabinet women were forced to follow in self-protection. She made a bitter lifelong enemy of the wife of Benjamin Harrison, who afterwards became mistress of the white house by some cutting comment she gave utterance to when both Blaine and Harrison were in the senate; and that difference led to the tragic candidacy of Blaine for the republican nomination in 1892 and had much to do with the party coolness that resulted in Harrison's defeat.

She had her limited circle of friends, close and devoted, but she entirely lacked the insincerity that would have led those for whom she did not care to count her as their friend. Her last years were clouded with tragedy and sorrow, and death came to her as a relief.

Remedied the Defects. A mischievous messenger boy put in his spare time a few days ago in plugging with putty the eyes and noses of several of the marble statues in Statway hall and now he is suffering from a punishment for "vandalism."

The first statue that this youthful offender fired up was that of Daniel Webster, which stares out of countenance every unfortunate who passes through Statway hall, going from the house of representatives to the senate; he was so well pleased with his achievement that he went on to improve several more. He would have touched up the entire collection of monuments if his puny had not given out.

It is needless to say that the sympathy of the Washington public is with the boy; for in his ineffective way he was simply trying to remedy a few of the defects which have worried visitors to the capitol for many years.

No more grotesque assemblage of marble freaks was ever brought together than the one in Statway hall. Only two or three of the commemorative statues by any stretch of the imagination can be called works of art, and a spot which might have been made as inspiring as Westminster abbey has developed a disgusting degree of rot from Jarley's wax works or the Eden Musee.

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

A Budget of Interesting and Spicy Comment from Gotham.

NEWPORT MAY BE ABANDONED

The Fashionable Set May Choose to Summer Elsewhere in the Future—The Hot Days in the City—Other Items.

New York.—Why deny that Newport is nervous at the prospect that it may one of these days be deserted, at the whim of the leaders of fashion? It is nervous.

Here is a city of 22,000 people, without a single industry of note except catering to summer residents. No factory chimneys belch forth smoke; the "cottagers" wouldn't like it. No lathe turns or spindle whizzes or chisel falls, except for the local industries of building; the "cottagers" are fussy about quiet.

The mayor and councilmen are obsequious in bowing to the wishes of the rich summer element—unless the summer element is divided against itself, as it is in the matter of checking murderous racing automobiles and in half a dozen other little matters.

The tax valuation of the entire permanent city is less than that of perhaps 200 summer families who may average a month a year each in the place. The hotel population is singularly small, perhaps, only five per cent. of what it is at Saratoga. The cottagers are supreme.

This is the condition to which a city has fallen that was in its early years a trade rival of Boston and Salem and Sag Harbor and New York—the last of this queerly assorted quartet not by any means then most considered. More than one of the vast fortunes which are in Rhode Island so disproportionately to the size of the state and its population were founded upon the Rhode Island slave trade, when Newport was the chief port of the traffic. Now if the rich take the sudden fancy to leave it, what will be its fate?

And Mrs. Fish has placed her residence upon the market for sale! Mrs

THE STORY TELLER

A WEEK OF PLAY

By LYMA SECKLE MARSHALL

AND so you think we had better—"Don't say the word you were going to. It sounds harsh and—I think we can arrange matters without using such terms."

"But you say there is no use for us to try to live together longer."

"Yes, because we are so—so—incompatible. Don't think this decision has been reached without much pain and anxious thought. We made a mistake like hundreds, yes, thousands of others, that is all. The world is full of mismatched married people."

"But, Margaret—"

"Don't let us prolong the agony, Albert. When I am gone your club, golf, the track, will absorb you, as usual, and you will not miss me after the first few days."

"Oh, will I not?"

"Of course not. We will close the house; I will give out that I have taken advantage of Marian's intended visit to Europe to accompany her, and you can move your things down to the club. It will be more convenient for you. There need be no publicity. After a while, in a year or so, when Marian returns, maybe she will take the house and then you can come back here. That would be pleasant for you. If not, you can sell it."

"And you?"

"I shall travel with Marian as long as she cares to roam, and when she returns to America I shall settle down in Paris."

"Humph! To study music?"

"That will be as good an excuse to give the world as another. Yes, to study music. I am sorry you have always disliked music, Albert."

"I have not always disliked it."

"Well, you have always censured me—oh, I know, not in words, but in actions, and that is worse. If it hadn't been for my music I don't know what I would have done during the hours you were at the club and the links, and especially lately, since you have become so infatuated with horses."

"I would never have gone to the club and the links—at least, not so often."

"WHEN DO YOU INTEND TO START FOR EUROPE?"

If your time had not been so fully occupied with concerts and musicians—"There is no use for us to try to live together again. We are not compatible. I am a drag on your recreation."

"Indeed you are not?"

"Well, I would be if I did not efface myself, and you—"

"Are an obstacle in the way of your advancement."

"No, not that, Albert, only you do not understand my love for music."

"I guess I don't. And so we must say goodbye—give up our home," he glanced around the dining apartment which he had furnished, "I, to take to the race track or any old place, while you wander over the face of the earth. A pleasant prospect, truly. He laughed bitterly."

"It is too late for heretics, Albert. I simply cannot live this way any longer."

"Do you want a—a divorce?"

"A divorce? Gracious, no."

"But think of the years, the future stretching away in loneliness!"

A look of horror came into her eyes, the tears that did not fall, buried all expression out of them.

"If," she began, hesitatingly, "if the time comes when you want your freedom, when you have seen enough of me—you wish to put in my place—"

"Margaret!" His voice was stern and arched toward his eyes.

"You might, you know, though not low, of course, but in the years to come. I would not want to stand in your way, to condemn you to a life of—"

"That will do, Margaret. I shall never ask nor desire to be free. Should the day come, however, when you prefer such a request I shall, of course, make no opposition."

"If, Oh, Albert!" the tone was not angry and the tears which fell now in a perfect torrent betokened how deep was the wound his words had given.

"Margaret!" The tenderness in his voice almost won her, but the thought of the long hours she had spent alone, the miles she had traversed while waiting for him to return from his pleasures, intruded itself, and she walked to the window without uttering the outstretched hands. He shrugged his shoulders, flicked a piece of dust from his sleeve and said, in a matter-of-fact way:

"You have made the decision. When do you intend to start for Europe?"

"A week from to-day, but I thought I would leave to-night for Boston that I might spend the interim with mother."

"I will order the carriage. Shall we say goodbye now?"

She noted his flushed cheeks and the reckless glitter in his eyes and hesitated.

"Not now," she answered, gently. "I don't leave until eight o'clock. Will you not have dinner with me here at home. We can say goodbye afterwards."

"As you will," he said, and left the room without looking at her.

She sat in the chair by the window, into which she had dropped when he left the house, until she heard his latchkey in the door just before the dinner hour. Then she flew to her dressing room.

Dinner was an ordeal for them both. It is a difficult matter to laugh and discuss ordinary things when the heart is breaking. But the hardest moment for him was after they had retired to the drawing room and he knew the hour had come to part.

"It is time," he said, and held out his hand.

Margaret came forward and stood before him looking into his eyes.

"A week is such a little while," she said, "when compared to the years that are to come. I have a proposition to make. Perhaps you will think it a strange one under the circumstances; anyway, don't hesitate to refuse if you feel the least desire to do so."

"I shall have no desire to refuse."

"We were happy, Albert, the first year of our married life. You did not spend so much time away then, and you cared for me. No, don't say anything yet, please. I did not give so much time to music, either, nor did I until—well, never mind that now. My proposition is this: Now don't laugh; it is too serious."

"Why, Margaret, you know I could not laugh at anything you did or said."

"Thank you. I wish, instead of going to mother's, to stay here, with you, and for that short time to play we were spending our honeymoon again. Is it asking too much?"

"Margaret!" There was a whole volume in his tone, if he had not been too much occupied with her proposition to read it.

"Just a little week. I think you will not miss it, and because you used to love me, and care for me, and be tender to me, I think, perhaps, it will not be hard for you to do it again, just for a few days. Then we will forget that we played at being lovers and we will take up life where we left it off before that, and say goodbye—forever."

She was looking at him anxiously, too anxiously to note that he was trembling and making a mighty effort to control himself. She only wondered why he hesitated before he said gently:

"Shall we begin now?"

"If you please," she answered.

"Sweetheart!" he murmured, as he folded her in an embrace that almost crushed her. She laid her arms about his neck, wondering how it was that he could be so good an actor, and gave herself up, unconsciously, to his caresses.

After breakfast a week later Margaret beckoned her husband into the drawing room. A strange sadness had pervaded her since her waking moment and Albert regarded her anxiously.

"The week is up," she said, without preface.

"Well, suppose it is," he answered.

"We must say goodbye, now."

"Has it been a pleasant week to you, Margaret?"

"Yes." She was afraid to say more.

"Then I have a proposition to make," he cried, excitedly. She looked at him breathlessly. "Let us keep on living that way, sweetheart, always, forever. Shall we?"

"Oh, if we only could," she breathed, rather than spoke, so fearful was she that the scene was not real.

"We will," he said, earnestly. "I think we have both learned the value of life and love."

Silk Caterpillars.

The nests of a caterpillar of undetermined species, living in a single forest in Madagascar, offer a possible new source of fine silk. M. Terry, of the Madagascar forestry department, states that these nests, which are attached to trees, are of dazzling whiteness, and are about 16 inches long, consisting of silk—tissues, very flexible and very tenacious—much resembling that of the common silkworm. From 100 to 150 caterpillars are found in a single nest, going out at night to feed. The caterpillars are very voracious. It is probable that they can be successfully introduced into other forests. Experiments are being made to determine the value of the silk.—Nature.

Giant Students.

There are 12 Yale students who, because they are more than six feet one inch tall, are eligible to membership in the new club of Brobdingnags at the university. The president is Frederick W. Wilhelm, of New York; the secretary, George A. Gross, of Watbury, Conn.; and the vice president and treasurer, Stuart B. Phelps, of Cincinnati. The tallest man of the club is King and Pelham streets. Jim W. Thorne Baker, of Cincinnati, who kept busy during his stay here stands six feet five inches in his stocking hands with his old friends.

James Connors of Waukegan, one of the early citizens of Rhineclander, was here Tuesday. Mr. Connors is an old time North-Western passenger conductor. He formerly owned and edited the residence now occupied by W. H. Gilligan, on the corner of King and Pelham streets. Jim W. Thorne Baker, of Cincinnati, who kept busy during his stay here stands six feet five inches in his stocking hands with his old friends.

Government inspectors passed upon the wonder 55,584,619 live animals last year at a growth of thirty and the number of a little more than a cent each.

A CREEK MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

Had the Bride's Father.

At the time of the first settlement of America by the whites the Creek Indians were more given to ceremony than any of the other tribes. Their chiefs were held in such veneration that the first-born male child of each family was sacrificed to him in the presence of the mother. They were sun worshipers, offering sacrifices to it of grain and animals. A feature of a Creek marriage ceremony was the prostration of the bride and groom and their friends to the setting sun on the day of the wedding. When first known they lived in Florida, Georgia and Alabama. They were nearly all removed to a reservation west of the Mississippi in 1826, at which time they numbered some 25,000. Now they number but about 15,000.

(They wore nothing but loin cloths made of moss, and a feather in their hair. Men and women dressed alike. Lived in villages fortified with moats, etc.)

EXPENSIVE FRENCH FARE.

Peacocks Served in Their Beautiful Plumage at Luncheon on State Occasions.

Word comes from Paris that the latest dish at fashionable luncheons and dinners is peacock served in all the glory of its plumage at a cost of $100. A rich American woman just back from a two years' stay in Europe entertained several listeners the other day with an account of how she first discovered that peacock was included in the Parisian menu, reports the New York Sun.

"Not long after I reached Paris," she said, "I got an invitation to a luncheon by an American woman in honor of Lady Somebody. When the day came I was not very well, and at the last minute I decided to send a regret."

"When, later on, I learned what I had missed, I was sorry enough. It was at a dinner given two nights later by the same hostess to a distinguished visiting diplomat that I heard about the peacock."

"I sat next the diplomat and I heard the hostess remark near the close of the dinner:

"'Had I known a few days earlier that you were coming I could have given you a less commonplace menu.'"

"As a matter of fact the menu included all the delicacies of the season, and this guest of honor took care to point out."

"What more could you possibly have given me?" he inquired.

"Well, I might have given you peacock," she was berating him.

"At first the diplomat thought I was joking. Then the story of the luncheon came out."

"It seems that at the proper time for the game course, appeared the peacock, borne aloft on a platter by the butler. Its magnificent spread tail sweeping far over his shoulder. Just before the bird's advent the entire center of the large oval table had been cleared and there the bird alighted to occupy the post of honor until the end of the meal. The effect was imposing."

"Before that, when the peacock was taken from the oven, and before its brilliant plumage had been restored, the breast was carried and placed in another dish which was to be passed to the guests."

"When I afterward made some inquiries on my own account I learned that one must give an order for a peacock several days ahead, for the birds are not by any means plentiful, and that the lowest price charged for one is $100. I found, too, that peacock is difficult to cook; that is to cook in such fashion that it will be appetizing."

"One chef told me that the first parboils the bird, then roasts it, then carves the meaty parts and cooks them in a saucepan with a wonderful assortment of condiments and a liquor that includes Sherry wine. After all, though, the great success of a peacock course is the sensation it creates and its decorative features."

The head of a leading New York restaurant, when asked why the peacock was not included in the fashionable menu over here shrugged his shoulders and answered:

"It's tough eating!"

"But what of that?" remarked some one. "Think of the scenic possibilities it affords. Americans are always keen after decorative features at their banquets no matter what they cost."

"Don't you believe," asked another, "that now the peacock has been taken up in Paris dining rooms it will soon be the fashion in New York?"

"Perhaps," said the restaurant man, with a shrug.

A Distinction.

"I dislike so much to be called a 'poetess,'" said a young woman who sometimes wrote verses for publication.

"Perhaps," suggested her matter-of-fact brother, "if you will write a little better quality of poetry people will call you a poet."—Youth's Companion.

THE BIKER AND HIS LION.

Wheelman in Africa Has an Adventure with a Fierce Lion.

On a mellow moonlight evening a cyclist was riding along a lonely road in the northern part of Mashonaland. As he rode, enjoying the somber beauty of the African evening, he suddenly became conscious of a soft, stealthy tread on the road behind him, relates the Philadelphia Ledger. It seemed like the jog-trot of some heavy, cushion-footed animal following him. Turning round, he was scared very badly to find himself looking into the glaring eyes of a huge lion. The puzzled animal acted very strangely, now raising his head, now lowering it, and all the time sniffing the air in a most perplexed manner.

Here was a surprise for the lion. He could not make out what kind of an animal it was that could roll, walk and sit still all at the same time—an animal with a red eye on each side and a brighter one in front. He hesitated to pounce upon such an outlandish being—a being whose blood smelled so oddly.

No cyclist since the Romans invented wheels ever "scorched" with more honest and single mindedness of purpose. But, although he pedaled and pedaled, although he perspired and panted, his effort to get away did not seem to place any more territory between him and the lion, for that animal, like Mark Twain's coyote, kept up his annoying, calm trot and never seemed to tire.

The poor rider was finally so exhausted from terror and exertion that he decided to have the matter over with right away. Suddenly slowing down, he jumped from his wheel and, facing abruptly about, thrust the brilliant headlight full into the face of the lion.

This was too much for the beast. It was this fright that broke the lion's nerve, for at this fresh evidence of mystery on the part of the strange rider animal, who broke himself into halves and then cast his big eye in any direction he pleased, the monarch of the forest turned tail and, with a wild rush, retreated in a very hyacinthine manner into the jungle, evidently thanking his stars for his miraculous escape from that awful being. Thereupon the bicyclist, with new strength returning and devoutly blessing his acetylene lamp, pedaled his way to civilization.

OLD GIRL GRADUATES.

If the likeness of girl graduates which now make an attractive feature of many newspapers are true to the life, and undoubtedly they are in most cases, doesn't it seem that those leaving the high schools have a remarkably mature look? In some instances they look to be quite 25 years of age and as knowing and wise as girls who really have seen that number of years are usually found to be in this sophisticated age. It seems rather curious, too, that such young girls should look so "finished," but it is probably just an evening up of things in their respective families, as their mothers and grandmothers are undoubtedly engaged in taking beauty-and-youth-renewing courses with years from five to twenty-five taken from their ages. We will record it as the result of an effort of nature to square accounts.—Boston Transcript.

Related to a Prince.

Jeson Von Puttkamer, the 16-year-old grandson of Prince Bismarck, is a press feeder in a job printing establishment in Wilkesbarre, Pa. His aunt, Mrs. Mary Royer, with whom he lives, is a scrubwoman. The boy's father, Francis Von Puttkamer, was an officer in the German cavalry. About 25 years ago, the boy says, he quarreled with Prince Bismarck and fled from Germany, giving up home, position and money. In New York he was at one time a dishwasher. He married and two children were born—Marguerite, aged 16, who is now a mill worker in Philadelphia, and Jesco.

Pumping a Ship's Cargo.

The "Grainhopper" or Derrick elevator now in use by the London Grain Elevator company at the London docks has been specially designed for transshipping the corn from the holds of the largest types of American liners engaged in the grain trade into lighters for conveyance to other coasting vessels or warehouses. Its spout, in which travels an endless belt covered with buckets, will draw 150 tons of corn an hour from the hold of a vessel. When ready for action it suggests the great stomach pump that it is.

THE LATEST WRINKLE.

Everything in the Way of Gifts Has Reference to the Recipient's Birth Month.

Many a girl is busy nowadays decorating her room, her personal belongings and herself with the flowers, gems and colors which have reference to her birth month, and in making presents to her friends she gives them also the same significance.

For the last few years there has been an increasing attempt to make gifts which recognize in some way the recipient's pet fads. As this is an athletic age, all sorts and kinds of things have been made having reference to golf, tennis, bicycling, riding and driving. Now the fad is to utilize the symbols of the birth month.

For herself the girl uses chiefly the flowers for the month in which she was born. These she cultivates, if she has a garden, and wears. She decorates her room with them in draperies, bed covers, upholstery for trees or willow furniture and hangings for her windows. There are so many pretty things in floral designs that every purse finds something desirable within reach. The girl even embroiders her handkerchiefs and lingerie with her flower, though it must be said that she does not put much work into the latter unless it is for a trousseau. In this outdoor age she cares more for sports than for needlework, and she can buy her underwear for less than she can make it.

Here are the three chief emblems for the several months—gems, flowers and astral colors:

January—White onyx, snowdrop, blue and Nile green.

February—Amethyst, primrose, pink, blue and Nile green.

March—Bloodstone, violets, white, pink, emerald and black.

April—Diamond, daisy, white and rose.

May—Emerald, hawthorn, red and lemon yellow.

June—Pearl, honeysuckle, red, blue and white.

July—Ruby, water lily, green and russet brown.

August—Moonstone, poppy, red and green.

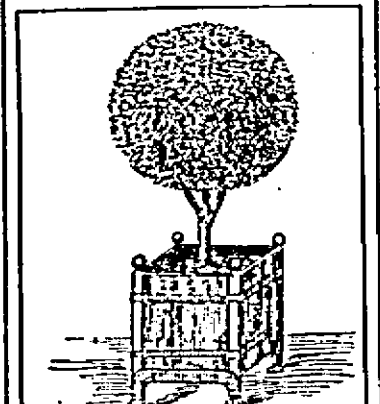

September—Sapphire, morning glory, gold and black with blue dots.

October—Opal, hops, black, crimson and light blue.

November—Topaz, chrysanthemum, golden brown and black.

December—Turquoise, holly, gold and brown.

There are gorgeous things in the way of birthday pillows ready made or ready stamped at a low price to make up in birthday designs. These have not only the appropriate colors, flowers and jewels, but the signs of the zodiac for the month. The birth month colors or flowers are also put into picture frames, handkerchief and tie or veil cases, cushions and bureau covers. The imitation jewels can be bought to sew on. Birthday spoons with the appropriate flowers can be found, some with the gems set in, and rings with both flowers and gems. For the children there are pencils and pen holders set with imitation birth stones.—Washington Star.

SQUARE TUB IS THE THING.

tion that the demand will become greater yet. The bay trees are imported from European nurseries and come across in round tubs, in which they remain, merely getting a coat of paint. Of course, there is the decided advantage of ease in handling that goes with the round tub, and it will, therefore, endure undoubtedly, says American Gardening.

But as a matter of harmony and balance a square tub is greatly to be preferred. At its very best the bay tree is very formal, and its true use lies in conjunction with buildings of a formal character. This is especially the case with standards. In conjunction with the straight lines of the buildings and their appurtenances, such as piazzas, etc., the square tub fits the picture better than the round one and serves to accentuate the more the round head of the tree itself. In the square tub the tree top has a distinct character of its own which stands out prominently.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

SOME BOUDOIR DON'TS.

Simple Things for the Complexion Which Are Worth Knowing and Putting in Practice.

Don't be afraid of sunshine. Curative powers are in the chemical rays of the sun, and they rejuvenate.

Don't think of the complexion only and fear tan and freckles; they can be removed. The sun is one of the most efficient of all surgical methods in the treatment of morbid growths as warts, moles and all parasitical skin diseases.

Don't use borax and rose water to remove tan and freckles without putting on a little cold cream afterward, for borax makes the skin dry.

Don't use cold water when giving the face a cosmetic scrub. Warm water, followed by a dash of cold water, is better.

Don't despise the humble lemon. With the juice of a lemon and the beaten white of an egg, mixed in hand, may touch up her freckles in the seclusion of her boudoir and no one be the wiser.

Don't forget that vinegar will eradicate yellow stains from the face. Bathe the bruise at once with vinegar and discoloration will be prevented.

Don't have a shiny nose and forehead because it is warm weather. Use a little cologne or spirits of camphor in the water when bathing the face.

Don't wash your face in cold water the moment you reach a washstand if you have been traveling. Remove traces of dust and smoke with cold cream, and wipe off with a soft towel.

Don't expect to cure an eruption on the face by an external application only. A hot foot bath containing washing soda will often cure this trouble.

Don't use tincture of benzoin on the face unless the skin is dry. It is detrimental to an oily one. This is an instance of a preparation excellent in itself but not suited to every complexion.—Chicago Record-Herald.

PROPER CARVING OF FOWLS.

Illustration of the Scriptural Method by a Monk for His Hostess.

A scriptural method of carving fowls when in secular company was claimed by a witty monk, who, having been asked to carve one day, said: "Inasmuch as you demand it, I will carve the fowl according to biblical principles." "Yes," exclaimed the hostess, "act according to the scriptures."

The theologian therefore began the carving, relates the Chicago Daily News. The baron was tendered the head of the fowl, the baroness the neck, the two daughters a wing apiece, and the two sons a first joint, the monk retaining the remainder. "According to what interpretation do you make such a division?" inquired the host of his confessor, as he regarded the monk's heaping plate and the scant portions doled out to his family. "From an interpretation of my own," replied the monk. "As the master of your house the head belongs to you by right; the baroness, being most near to you should receive the neck, which is the nearest to the head; in the wings the young girls will recognize a symbol of their mobile thoughts, that, if from one desire to another; as to the young barons, the drumsticks they have received will remind them that they are responsible for supporting your house, as the legs of the capon support the bird itself."

THE PINKHAM CURES.

ATTRACTING GREAT ATTENTION AMONG THINKING WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, of 243 E. 11th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people.

Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

His Harvest Moon.

"A young friend of mine," said Senator Joseph W. Bailey, "married not long ago a woman of 50 years. She was rich and very beautiful and young."

"The day after their wedding I met the bride and bridegroom on a Pullman train, traveling west. The bridegroom went into the smoking compartment with me, and we talked up. He smoked gloomily. He was silent a long while."

"Well, Jack," said I, "so this is your honeymoon, eh?"

"He smiled grimly. 'Don't call it my honeymoon,' he said. 'It's the harvest moon with me.'"

SENTIMENTAL JEWELRY.

"Dearest" Pendant and "Good Luck" Bangle Are in Astonishing Demand Just Now.

Sentimental jewelry is in vogue just now, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that sentiment is finding expression in the productions of the jewelers and goldsmiths to a greater degree at the present time than for some seasons past. Witness the popularity of the heart-shaped bangle and pendant, the fancy for the miniature adorned brooch, and various ornaments and trinkets introducing the true love knot or some similar sentimental device. Now comes a new claimant for consideration, and from an English source, namely, the "Dearest" pendant reproduced here. The significance of the sentimental designation is found in the gems that embellish the ornament, the initials of which spell the word "dearest." The stones used are diamond, emerald, andethyst, ruby, sapphire and topaz, the emerald appearing twice. A brooch on the same order is also to be had and likewise a ring, with cluster stone settings. The most recent "Dearest" production is a padlock bracelet formed of gold links; at regular intervals the solid chain is separated by seven small gold hearts and in the center of each heart flashes one of the gems included in the "dearest" group. Anything more sentimental in the jewelry line would be hard to find. Those to whom the dearest combination does not appeal may find an opportunity for reveling in sentiment in a bracelet and brooch also in pendant and brooch, with the word "remembrance" spelled out in jewels. Or some particular Christian name may be indicated.

Less frankly sentimental and yet belonging to this special group in jewelry is a novelty known as the "good luck" bangle, with a beautifully enameled shamrock as the distinctive feature. A chain composed of shamrocks, lady birds and pearls in alternating sequence is the accompaniment of this bangle when worn as a neck ornament.—Brooklyn Eagle.

thrust it into her husband's hand

"If women would pay more attention to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would observe results they would find that the doctors' prescriptions 'do not perform the many cures they are given credit for."

While consulting with my druggist he advised McEwre's Wine of Cardui and I took it and have every reason to thank him for a new life opened up to me with restored health, and I only took three months to cure me."

Wine of Cardui is a regulator of the menstrual functions and is a most astonishing tonic for women. It cures scanty, suppressed, too frequent, irregular and painful menstruation, falling of the womb, whites and flooding. It is helpful when approaching womanhood during pregnancy, after childbirth and in change of life. It frequently brings a dear baby to homes that have been barren for years. All druggists have $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

German Syrup.

We want to impress on our readers that Rosch's German Syrup is positively the only preparation on the market today that does relieve and cure consumption. It contains the specific, such as pure tar, extracts of gums, etc., which have been so highly endorsed for the cure of coughs, colds and consumption by the great medical congresses. The consumptive whether his disease is in the throat or lungs, must have rest at night, and be free from the spasms of dry and racking cough in the morning. The diseased parts want rest, healing and soothing treatment, and the patient needs fresh air, and good food, etc. German Syrup will give free and easy expectoration in the morning with purity and permanent relief. Small bottles, 25 cents; regular size, containing nearly four times as much, 75 cents. Sold in Rhinelander at the drug store of J. J. Beardon.
